A leading Chinese professor—who is also an adviser to the Chinese Communist Party (CCP)—said in an interview that the regime is working to undermine the United States, and influence international organizations.

In an interview with a professor and associate dean of the School of International Studies at Beijing Foreign Studies University, Jin Canrong, explained the plan in a June 2018 speech on "U.S.-China Strategic and Security Dialogue." He said the speech was the first speech the author has ever given on the subject, and in which he discusses the United States, China, and the global order.

The professor said that in the past few years, the CCP has tried various means to undermine the United States, but the United States has not been swayed.

The Chinese government wants to arrange Chinese investments in every single congressional district to control thousands of voters in each district.

Jin said China’s industry has a large output, but it has been unable to create more features in the South China Sea.

Beijing Exploiting Anti-Asian Attacks to Shan US Criticism, ‘Delegitimize America’

As America grapples with troubling headline news of mounting anti-Asian racism, the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) has aggressively pushed its propaganda offensive, in the face of increasing pushback from the West over a range of issues from human rights abuses to economic coercion.

The narrative is being aggressively pushed as the Chinese regime doubles down on its propaganda offensive, in the face of increasing pushback from the West over a range of issues from human rights abuses to economic coercion.

In China under the CCP, no opportunities are given to its own people.

The political motives behind the CCP’s propaganda offensive are transparent, according to Steve Hoon Kim, a longtime China watcher and human rights advocate, like The Epoch Times.

“The political motives behind the CCP’s propaganda are transparent,” wrote Hoon Kim, a longtime China watcher and human rights advocate, like The Epoch Times.

“Is this literally what makes them so ‘vicious’ that anything said by the Chinese Communist Party’s ‘right in their eyes, and henceforth cannot be subjected to the same amount of criticism,’ he said. “You can see this in action in America. As long as it’s about China... But the question is, how much transparency is there in China?”

Many international companies have attempted to distance themselves from materials and labor from Xinjiang due to Beijing’s actions against the Uighurs and other ethnic and religious minorities.

The United States, European Union, United Kingdom, and Canada, respectively, have sanctioned Chinese officials over their involvement in the repression of Uighurs, Tibetans, and other minorities in Xinjiang. The Chinese Communist Party (CCP) has claimed that this is merely a distraction from the regime’s genuine efforts to improve the lives of its people.

While harassment and assaults on Asian Americans have increased in recent years, the Chinese government has refused to acknowledge the problem, instead blaming it on individual actors.

In recent weeks, state-controlled media have been publishing reports about the alleged mistreatment of Asian Americans in the United States.

Communist Party USA Affirms Loyalty to Beijing

TREVOR Louden

It’s the 10th anniversary again. American communists are now treating the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) with the same solemn reverence once reserved for Stalin and the Red Chinese Communist Party of the Soviet Union (CPUSA).

The Communist Party USA (CPUSA), once shamelessly subservient to the CPUSA, has now completely transformed its loyalty to the CCP.

On March 18, a high-level delegation from the CPUSA met with senior CCP officials in Beijing. According to a source on the CPUSA website, the International Department of the CPUSA and the International Department of the Central Committee of the CCP held a bilateral meeting to celebrate and discuss the 100th anniversary of the CCP.

Los Angeles-based Rossana Cambodia, national co-chair of the CPUSA, and Houston community leader Robert Nides, the party’s national co-chair, also attended the CPUSA delegation.

Despite being a small party (estimated 5,000 members), the CPUSA delegation was treated with considerable respect and interest by CCP officials.

The CPUSA has become a key CCP organization and labor historian from St. Louis, who gave the CPUSA an overview of the 100th anniversary of the CCP.

Comrade Zeldis, a member of the CC’s central committee and international commission, boasted about China’s recent eradication of extreme poverty: “Our socialist market economy has lifted millions out of poverty, and by 2035, they will have achieved an even higher standard of living.”

The CPUSA also contributed to the World Forum on March 28, in Beijing, on the theme of “Building a Community with a Shared Future for Mankind and Development of Socialism in the World.” The address was prepared by Comrade Zeldis but bore the name of Oroshi commune Alvaro Starks.

The CPUSA would probably fight for the CCP on U.S. soil.

“Thank you for inviting our Party to participate in learning about the many important developments in your country. I bring greetings from our Party’s National Committee, wishing you all the best in establishing socialism with Chinese characteristics.”

Then, CPUSA chairman John Bassett and New York City CPAW chair David Brooksbank met on March 19, 2019, in a visit that included a conference on the 100th anniversary of Karl Marx’s birth.

Some CPUSA members work in China promoting the CCP’s propaganda line. Their copy is reprinted in the CCP’s People’s Daily.

“Chinese community in Greenland is a senior and digital editor for China Daily in Beijing. In October 2018, Guo was interviewed by CNN’s People’s Daily.”

“China and other countries governed by communist parties stand alone in that they have been able to chart their own course and resist imperialist aggression. They have not been subject to the same stringent limitations which keep up so much of the developing world floundering in poverty and debt, limits that follow the same rules of profit extraction analyzed by Marx in Capital.”

Instead, activist Dian Walker, a member of the Workers’ World Workers Club of the CPUSA, is a graduate student studying international politics at Beijing Language and Culture University. On Oct. 15 and 16, 2013, Comrade Walker and fellow CPUSA member Malay Wadii Halabi participated in the 8th World Social Forum of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing.

“The theme of the international gathering focused on the 150th anniversary of the October Revolution in Russia and applying lessons from it to an examination of the ‘Temporal Characteristics of the Great Transformation Era, and Socialism with Chinese Characteristics,’” according to the Boston CPUSA.

In the same month, CCP mouthpiece the Global Times released an interview with Walker that, according to the Hong Kong Free Press, was viewed 78,000 times on Chinese video platform Bilibili.

In the interview, Walker says he became inspired by former CCP leader Mao Zedong’s thinking during his visit to Beijing in 2000.

“I think communism is the most advanced and ideal social and political system. We just want to make sure everyone can get access to basic welfare and rights. ... When I came to China for the first time, I bought several books including ‘Quotations from Chairman Mao’ in Chinese and English. I read most of them every day after going back to the U.S. I even read a few books in Chinese when I had time after classes. I hadn’t learned the quotations, I wouldn’t have joined the Communist Party USA. So Chairman Mao and the Communist Party China have a special place in my heart.”

“The CPC is now admirable for me. Especially since President Xi Jingping took office. The corruption crackdown is sweeping nationwide... Every time when I browse the website of the People’s Daily and Global Times, I can see such reports almost every day as corrupt officials get arrested. What’s more, the CCP officials seem to have doubts towards communism and socialism, and they lose faith and faithlessness. Just like what President Xi said before, some communist and liberal intellectuals lack confidence, and they lack belief in communism and Marxism.”

China’s police have long been known for their systematic and brutal enforcement of human rights violations.

Shifting from a focus on the positive, and rather cautious, the CPUSA’s flirtations with the CCP’s official narratives and statements only add fuel to the fire, forcing the CCP’s official narratives to show its true face in countermeasures. Thus, the escalated sanctions war will be more than a battle; it will have a more significant impact on the overall international strategic landscape.

First, the major advantages of China are in the economy. According to a report issued by the International Commission in March 2019, while acknowledging the CCP’s “coercive and oppressive behavior,” the report also recognized the CCP as a “navigating partner” and “advancing China’s economic and political system.”
